mittee, after which it was handed to General Hancock. In reply the latter said:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee:

I appreents the honor conferred upon me by the democratic national convention lately assembled in Cincinnati, and I thank you for your countery in making that honor known to line as soon as the importance of the matter permits. I will prepare and send to you the formal secoptance of my nomination for the office of President of the United States.

Those present were then introduced to Hancock in turn, who had a few words of welcome for each. Stockton, then turning to Wm. English, who occupied the same position in the room where General Hancock had lately stood, said. The Cincinnati convention, with unanimity unparalleled, appointed us a committee to wait upon you at such time and place as would be most agreeable to you and inform you in person and in writing of your nomination. I now have the bours to congratulate curselves on the event and to present to you on the part of the committee and in the name of the committ

As a practical business man, not much accustomed to indiscretion of action or circumiocution of speech, I will say plainly, and in a few words, that I accept the high trust which you have tendered me with feelings of profound gratitude, and that I will, at an early date, formally and in writing make the acceptance which I am informed is usual on such eccasions. In doing this, I fully realize the great responsibility of the situation, care, turmoil, anxiety, misrepresentations and abuse which are certain to follow, and I theroughly understand that all the resources and power of our political fors from all parts of the land will be concentrated against us in Indiana, my native state, where the first grand battle is to be fought, and portably the most important of all; but there are great occasions where the discharge of high patriotic duties are to be considered above all personal considered above all personal considerations, and I shall not disregard the unanimous voice of the representatives of the majority of the American people which you speak here to day. (Applause) I am profoundly grateful for the high honer which has been conferred, and I have an abiding faith that, with the favor of God and of the people, we shall succeed in this contest.

The speaker was applanded at the close of his remarks, and then followed another handshaking between the women the distribution and the parlor. Shortly after this the committee and their nece ampanying friends again board of the Fietcher and left the island.
